

A COMPARISON OF CALIFORNIA AND NATIONAL PUBLIC ASSISTANCE STATISTICS THROUGH DECEMBER 1995

California Department of Social Services

Preface

This publication, "A Comparison of California and National Public Assistance Statistics" has been developed to provide a quick reference to selected information and caseload data for California and the United States.

This is the third publication of it's kind the California Department of Social Services (CDSS), Information Services Bureau (ISB), has released and represents the 1995 edition. The first two publications were released under the title "A Review of Selected National and Statewide Public Assistance Statistics."

Data displayed in this publication covers various annual timeframes. For California public assistance data, the period of July 1994 through June 1995 is used; for National public assistance data, October 1994 through September 1995 is used; for SSI/SSP data the 1995 calendar year is used.

Population data represented in this publication are from various population sources. Tables 7, 7a, 8, 19, 19a, 19b, which reflect national data, are Census population estimates. Tables 6, 6a, 6b, 18, 18-pg. 1, 18-pg. 2, 20 and 20a, which reflect California population counts, are California Department of Finance annual population estimates; the estimate date used for this publication is July 1, 1995.

The Welfare Reform Bill, known as the "Personal Responsibility Work Opportunity Reconciliation Act of 1996" will change many aspects of the programs the CDSS is responsible for and programs for which data is displayed in this publication. Data presented in this publication is point-in-time, as of December 1995, prior to enactment of "Welfare Reform."

A Brief Description of the Aid to Families With Dependent Children Program in California

Legislation dealing with public assistance (welfare) was first passed in California in 1865, providing state-funded appropriations for certain institutions caring for needy children. Aid was provided directly to mothers beginning in 1913, and to families in 1936, after the passage of the Federal Social Security Act (SSA) in 1935.

The SSA of 1935 brought federal money to the states for welfare purposes on a continuing basis. Soon thereafter, in order to qualify for federal funds, California made legislative and/or program changes, continuing its mother's-aid focus with minor modifications in coverage until well after World War II, when signs of an emerging recession created new demands for adoption of the complete Aid to Dependent Children (ADC) program made possible by the Social Security Act.

In 1962, the program was expanded to include children in foster care. In 1963, the title of the program was changed to its current name of Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC). As a means of keeping families intact, legislation was enacted in 1964 providing aid to families with unemployed fathers (AFDC/U). The requirement that certain recipients must register for employment and obtain training, the Work Incentive Program (WIN), was implemented in 1967.

Additional work programs, resulting from welfare reform initiatives, have replaced the earlier work programs such as WIN. Among them are the Greater Avenues Toward Independence (GAIN) program at the state level (initiated in 1986) and the Job Opportunity and Basic Skills (JOBS) (initiated in 1988) and Food Stamp Employment and Training (FSET) (initiated in 1985) programs at the federal level.

Major welfare reform was initiated at the state level in 1991, when a new budgeting system was devised to create a work incentive. In 1992, a barrier to full-time work was removed for unemployed AFDC recipients. The barrier removed was the "100 hour limit" that an AFDC/U parent could work in a month. In 1993, state legislation was passed to increase the work incentives, provide work support in the form of increased property limits, enhance the GAIN program and increase child care coverage. In addition, a program, known as Cal Learn, was established to provide incentives for pregnant and parenting teens to complete high school.

7..... 1977-78 - The 1977-78 Budget Act package provided a 5.24% COLA effective July 1, 1977, reflecting the CPI change from December 1975 to December 1976. For 1978-79, no COLA was allowed. Chapter 292, Statutes of 1978 (SB 154), suspended the statutory 7.71% COLA which reflected the change in CPI from December 1976 to December 1977. This represented a two year catch-up COLA.

8..... 1978-80 - Although the Budget Act of 1979 included funds for only a 4.5% COLA, a 15.16% COLA was applied effective July 1, 1978. This represented a two year catch-up COLA that was based on the December 1976 CPI change, (a one year COLA based on the December 1977 CPI change would have been 6.91%).

9..... 1980-81 - The 1980-81 Budget Act package provided a 15.48% COLA effective July 1, 1980, reflecting the change in CPI from December 1978 to December 1979. Chapter 511, Statutes of 1980, (AB 2982), effective January 1, 1981, created a new index to measure cost-of-living changes - the California Necessities Index (CNI). The CNI was based on various components of the CPI that more appropriately reflected the cost-of-living changes to low income families. The MAPs were reduced 2.48% to a level equivalent to a 13.0% increase over the 1978-80 standards. The 13.0% figure was determined by retroactively computing the CNI change from December 1978 to December 1979.

10..... 1981-83 - Chapter 69, Statutes of 1981 (SB 633), effective July 1, 1981 provided for an arbitrary 9.2% COLA based on the December 1978 CPI change. Chapter 327, Statutes of 1982, (SB 1326), suspended the MAPs except for families with nine or ten persons which were unchanged from the 1980-81 levels.

For 1982-83, no COLA was allowed. Chapter 327, Statutes of 1983 (AB 223) effective July 1, 1983 provided for an arbitrary 4.0 percent COLA in lieu of the statutory 5.7 percent COLA based on the December 1981 to December 1982 CNI change.

A Brief Description of the Food Stamp Program

The Federal Food Stamp Program

The federal Food Stamp Program provides monthly benefits that assist low-income households in purchasing the food to maintain adequate nutritional levels. The Food Stamp Program began in 1961 in eight areas nationwide, through a Presidential Executive Order. In 1964, Congress passed Public Law 88-525, known as the Food Stamp Act of 1964. This established the Food Stamp Program as a continuing program, scheduled for expansion each fiscal year. Public Law 93-86, enacted in 1973, mandated that the program be made available in every state no later than 1974.

Early in the program, eligible households purchased food coupons. The "purchase requirement" was eliminated by Public Law 95-113, the Food Stamp Act of 1977. Households pay for groceries with food stamps or coupons in place of money. Grocers take the coupons to a bank, and the stamps are credited to their accounts as if they were dollars. The Federal Reserve System pays the banks, and the U. S. Treasury pays the Federal Reserve, charging the costs to the U. S. Department of Agriculture (USDA). Most food or food products may be purchased with coupons. Hot foods and hot food products prepared for immediate consumption are prohibited as well as alcoholic beverages, tobacco, soap and other nonfood items.

Although the program is closely associated with welfare, it has remained a responsibility of the USDA. Technically, the Food Stamp Act is regarded as an agricultural measure since it expresses as one of its purposes the expansion of agricultural markets, as do many of the food donation programs enacted over the past thirty years.

California's Food Stamp program

California pilot tested the Food Stamp Program in 1963, in Humboldt County, one of several project areas that the Food and Nutrition Services, U.S. Department of Agriculture, authorized to try out the program on an experimental basis. In 1965, the State Legislature approved expansion of the program in California, and Los Angeles and Contra Costa counties entered the program. All California counties now participate in the Food Stamp Program.

In California, the actual administration of the program has been delegated by law to the fifty-eight county welfare departments, with the state responsible for supervising the county operation. The USDA pays all the costs of the food stamp benefits, and one-half of the costs of administering the program. The USDA also mandates the basic eligibility requirements and benefit levels. Supplemental Security Income/State Supplementary Payment (SSI/SSP) recipients are not eligible for the food assistance program in California under federal "cash-out" provisions related to the SSI/SSP program.

A Brief Description of the SSI/SSP Program

The federally-administered Supplemental Security Income (SSI) program was established by Congress in 1972, and payments began in January 1974. In the fifty states and the District of Columbia, it replaced the former federal-state programs of Old-Age Assistance (OAA), Aid to the Blind (AB) and Aid to the Permanently and Totally Disabled (APTD).

As of January 1995, under the SSI program, each eligible person living in his or her own household and having no other income is provided with a monthly cash payment of $458 ($687 for a couple if both members are eligible). If an individual or couple is living in another person's household and is receiving both food and shelter there, the federal benefit rate is reduced by one-third. For institutionalized persons, the eligibility requirements and payment standards depend on the type of institution.

When SSI was implemented in 1974, states were required to provide supplementary payments (SSP) to recipients transferred from the former state program. States were given the option of providing SSP to those newly-eligible for SSI. States could either administer the payments themselves or have the Social Security Administration make payments on their behalf. When state supplementary payments are federally-administered, as in the case in California, the Social Security Administration makes eligibility and payment determinations for the state.
